Creating a Python program for legal drafting requires a dynamic approach where users can input details, select drafting options, and view the output without errors. Here's a complete program:

```python
def draft_legal_document():
    print("\nWelcome to Legal Drafting Tool") print("Choose the type of legal document you want to draft:") print("1. Employment Agreement") print("2. Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA)") print("3. Rent Agreement") print("4. Termination Letter") print("5. Exit\n")

    while True:
        try:
            choice = int(input("Enter your choice (1-5): "))
            if choice == 1:
                employment_agreement()
            elif choice == 2:
                nda_agreement()
            elif choice == 3:
                rent_agreement()
